

Next to a house and a car, a horse may be the next most expensive thing that you buy so it makes sense to protect your investment and provide yourself with insurance. Advances in veterinary medicine mean that there are now more options for dealing with injuries thus enabling us to get you horse on the road to recovery more quickly. Illness, injury, theft or accidents can happen when we least expect them and can prove to be very costly. The cheapest policies often do not provide sufficient cover for some operations so do some research into exactly what type of insurance you require. Our vets will be able to give you some advice and speaking to other horse owners about their insurance is always a good idea.
